

TX10 Landscape Analysis

Initial analysis of TX-10 using public data.

TX-10 is currently represented by Republican Michael McCaul. Before Congress, McCaul was a federal prosecutor and counterterrorism chief in the U.S. Attorney's Office, served on the DOJ Public Integrity Section, and was Texas Deputy Attorney General under John Cornyn. He was first elected to congress in 2004 and is now in his 11th term.

Roll Call ranks McCaul as the richest member of congress, with a fortune worth at least $294 million. Much of his wealth comes from his wife, Linda McCaul, the daughter of Clear Channel Communications CEO and founder Lowry Mays.

Since taking office, McCaul has consistently taken right-wing positions:

- Healthcare: In his 2016 campaign, he insisted that "Obamacare must be repealed", and he voted for the House GOP's Obama-care repeal in 2017. He voted against the "Lower Drug Costs Now Act" to allow Medicare drug-prices.
- Taxes/Economy: Pro-business. He voted for the One Big Beautiful Bill Act, which will cause 17 million people to lose health coverage by 2034, while giving the richest 1 percent of America $121 billion in tax cuts.
- Immigration: Strongly anti-immigration. He voted yes on "Kate's Law" and yes on the No Sanctuary for Criminals Act. He voted against pro-immigrant bills, including the 2019/2021 "Dream Act" immigration bills (which would have provided citizenship paths). He championed wall funding and mandatory E-Verify in the Securing America's Future Act.
- Gun Control: Firmly pro-gun. NRA-endorsed (A-rated). He has blocked gun control proposals and other common-sense measures.
- Abortion: Strongly anti-abortion. He voted for the 20-week abortion ban in 2017.
- Climate/Environment: Rejects climate action. His record shows repeated votes to roll back EPA rules and boost fossil fuel production.
- Foreign Policy: Hawkish. He voted yes on all recent NDAA defense bills. He regularly supports increased military aid (especially to Ukraine and Israel) and tougher sanctions on adversaries. He strongly supported Trump's strikes on Iran's nuclear sites.

Congressional Results

TX-10 remains a tough district for Democrats.

From 2012 to 2018, Democratic margins steadily improved, but that progress stalled starting in 2020. Margins have since plateaued and gradually worsened.

In 2024, Republican Michael McCaul defeated Democrat Theresa Boisseau by nearly 27 points, similar to his 26-point win over Linda Nuno in 2022.

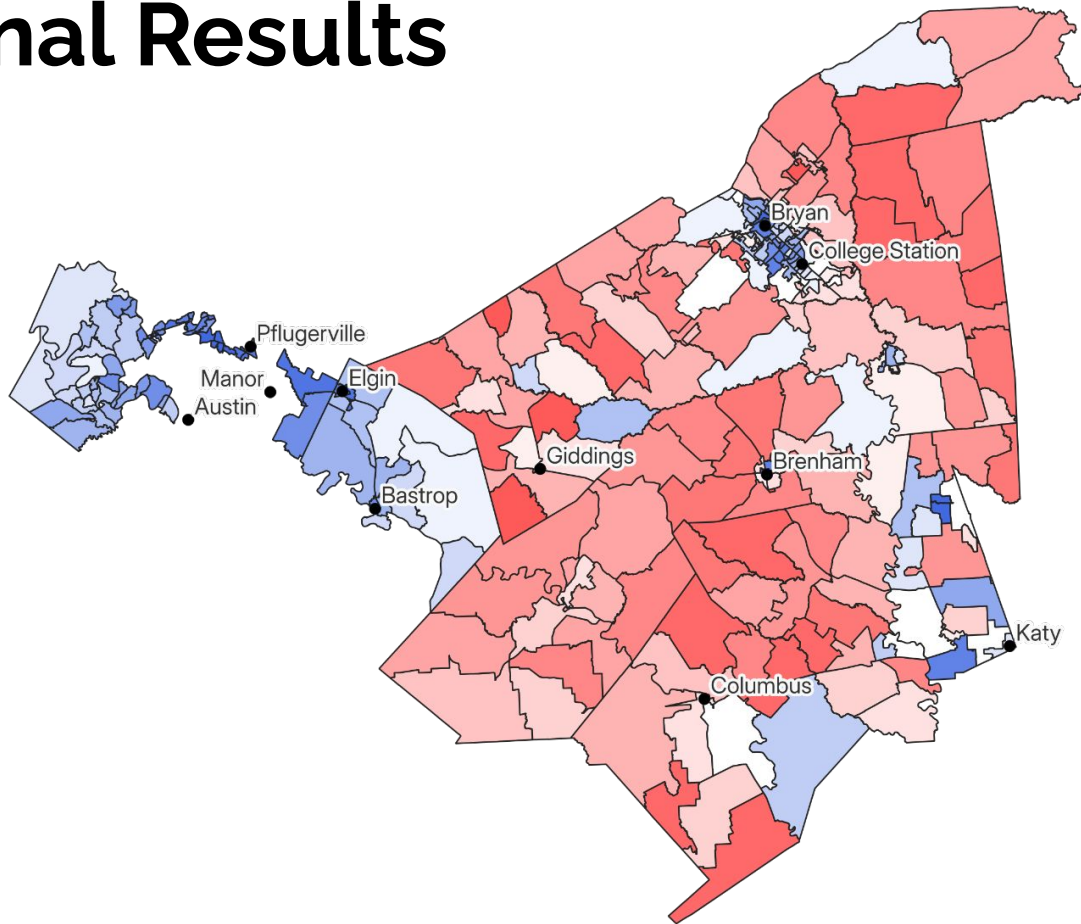

To show historical trends in the current boundaries of TX-10, I've combined precinct-level results from areas that were previously part of the 8th, 10th, 17th, 21st, 25th, and 31st districts between 2012 and 2020. This allows us to see past performance within the district as it is currently drawn.

2024 Congressional Results

In the 2024 general election, Republican Michael McCaul defeated Democrat Theresa Boisseau by nearly 27 points.

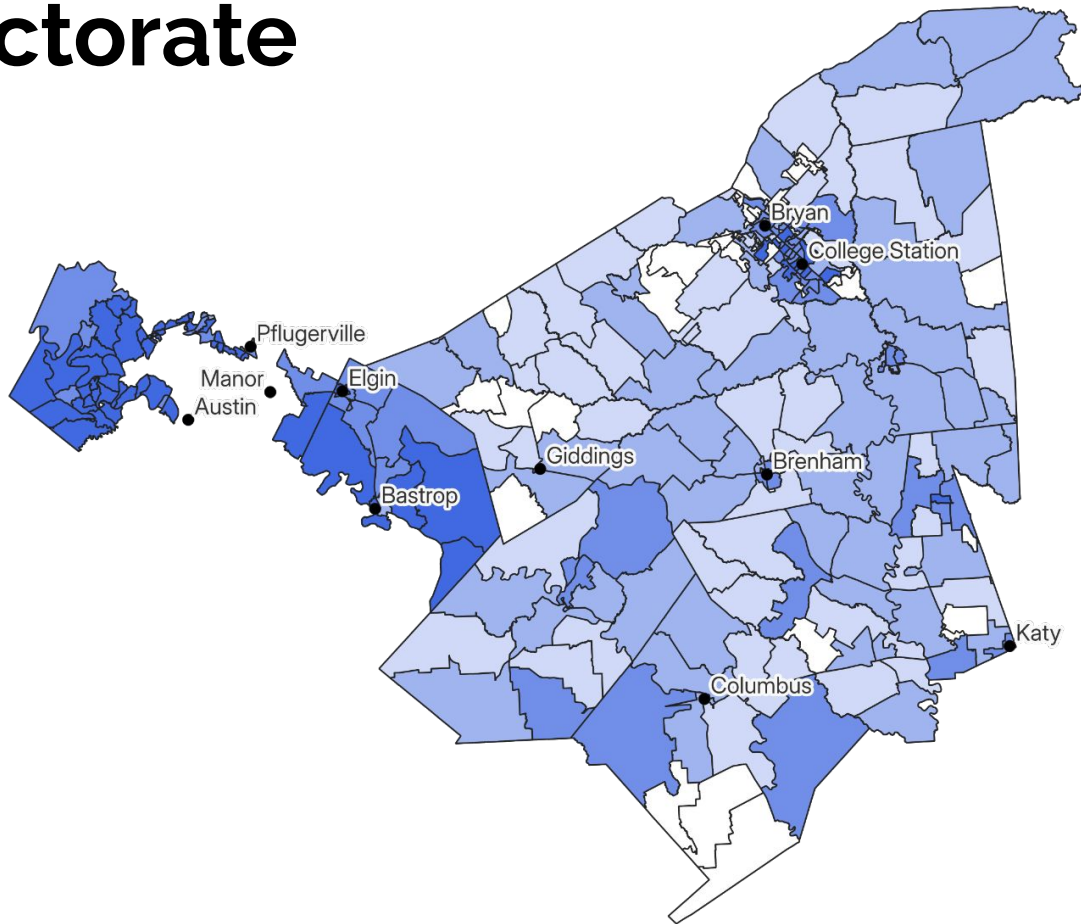

This mirrors 2022, when McCaul beat Democrat Linda Nuno by a similar 26-point margin.

2024 Primary Electorate

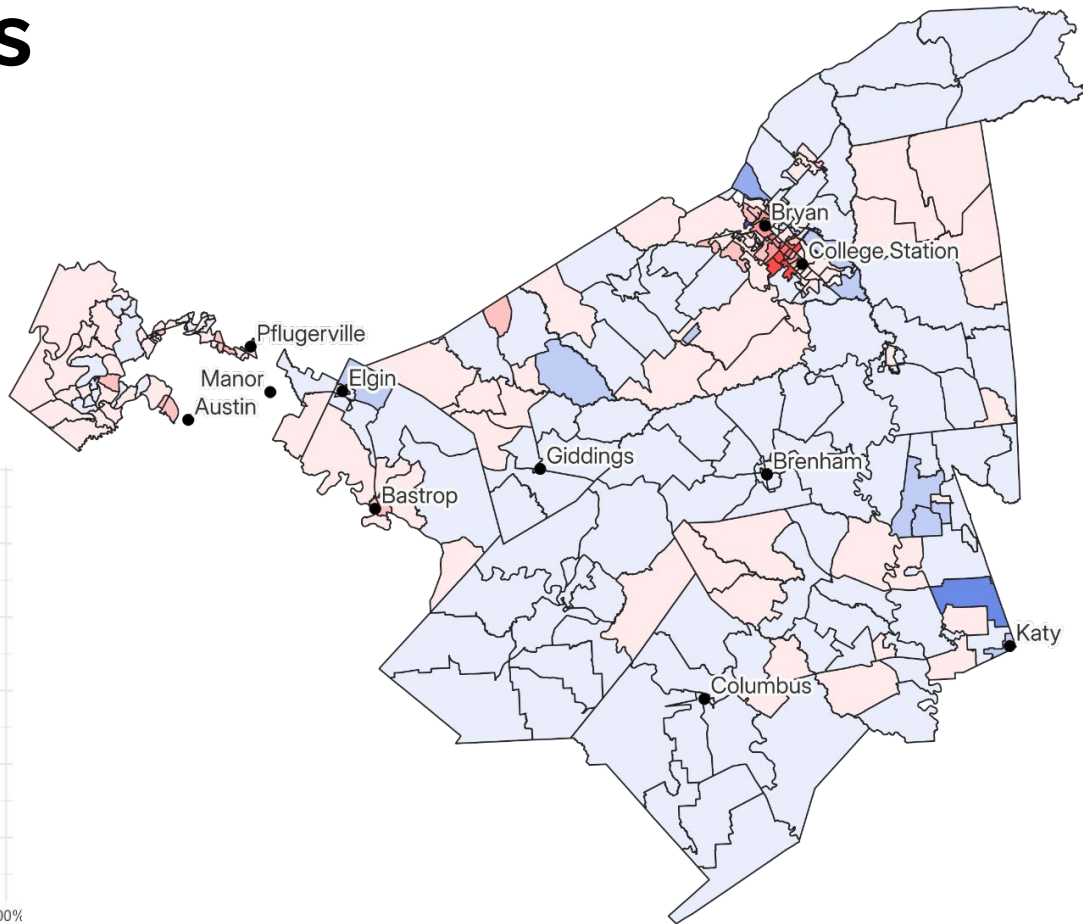

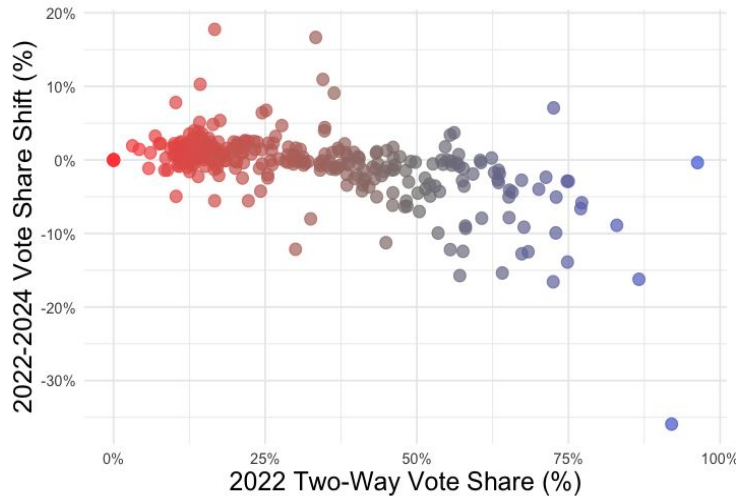

The TX-10 Democratic primary electorate is spread across the state, but centered in the College Station area, and in the suburbs surrounding Austin.

In the 2024 Democratic Primary, 44% of the votes came from Travis County, 17% came from Brazos County, with a smaller proportion coming from the rest.

2022 - 2024 Shifts

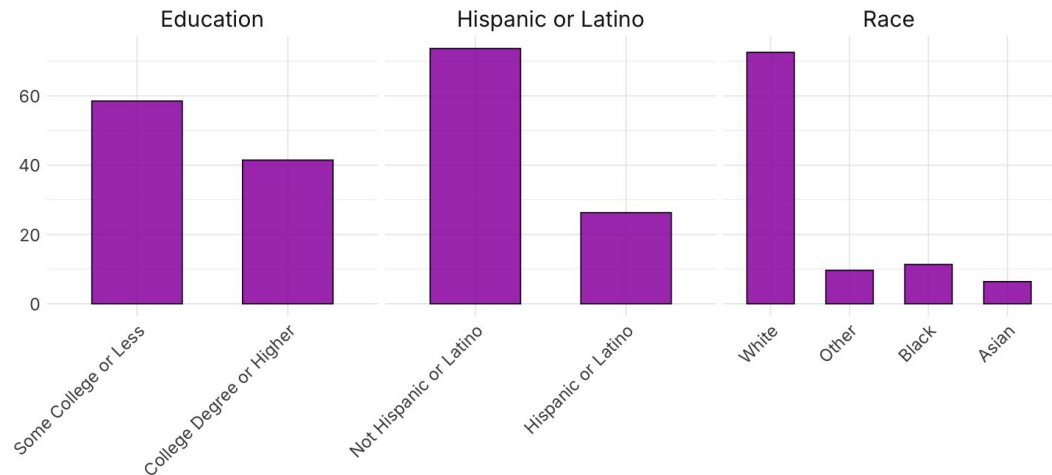

The largest shifts from 2022 to 2024 come from cities, and more densely populated areas. Solidly Democratic areas lost ground, while Republican areas held steady.

District Demographics

TX-10 is a majority-white district, with over 500,000 residents identifying as white. Black residents make up just under 80,000 people, while Asian and other racial groups account for about 110,000 combined. Hispanic or Latino residents total over 215,000 — about 26% of the district population*.

41.5% of adults in TX-10 have a college degree or higher, while a majority have some college experience or less.

 Note on Race and Ethnicity: The U.S. Census treats Hispanic or Latino as an ethnicity, not a race. This means individuals who identify as Hispanic or Latino can be of any race.*
